NO TYPHOID EPIDEMIC

Health of Pupils at the St. Louis
College.

ONLY ONE DEATH FROM THE FEVER

The Head of the Institution Describes Its Sanitary Features.

For some weeks past there have been rumors circulating about the city to the effect that the premises occupied by the St. Louis College are in an in-sanitary condition, and that because of their condition, several of the pupils have been stricken with typhoid fever.
The rumor also was to the effect that three or four of the pupils had died from the results of the fever. Brother Thomas, who is in charge of the college during the absence of Brother Bertram, who is away on a visit to the States, was seen yesterday, and asked to make such statements as he wished in the matter, either denying or confirming the rumors that are part of the public gossip of Honolulu. His version of the state of affairs is quite different from those that are passing from mouth to mouth. Brother Thomas said:

"During the past year we have had but two deaths among our students.
One of these was from typhoid. The other was from stomachic trouble. The pupil who died from fever was taken sick shortly after the vacation of June.
At first, nothing was thought of the boy's illness. He complained of a headache, and was placed in the in-firmery. He did not act like a boy that was seriously ill, but sang and whistled the airs they were playing. As the boy's health did not materially improve, we sent him to his family physician, who lives near the school. From the physician's, he went to his home in Punahou. When he consulted with his physician, the doctor told him that he could not, at that time, tell whether his condition was serious or not, so it can be readily seen that the teachers were not inflicting any great hardship upon the lad when they sent him to the physician's by himself. Besides, the boy, as I have just stated, went to his home, and so far as I know, no one there was alarmed at the state of his health. Some days later he grew worse, and finally it became apparent to all that the unfortunate boy was suffering from typhoid. A few days ago, it saddens me to say, the boy died. The statement that is being circulated regarding our treatment of the boy, namely, that we made him get up out of bed while in a weak, debilitated condition, and go to the physician's while he was not able to attend to his physical wants, and that he was not properly clothed at the time, are false. The teachers of the school were very much interested in the boy, and while no one expected that he would die when he left the college, at the same time, I can state positively that he was not neglected in any way.

"Since that time, another of our pupils has passed away. He died from hemorrhage of the stomach. The second boy was not of a robust temperament, being very large for his age.
Neither of the boys was particularly robust. The one who died of typhoid had just recovered from an attack of blood poisoning that had been almost fatal. His vitality had been very much drawn upon in consequence, and he was in no condition to withstand the insidious attack of the fever.

"As far as the Brothers are able, they do everything in their power to preserve the health of the pupils under them. The boys are always watched, and if they show the slightest deviation from the normal, they are taken care of at once. The day scholars, who might bring disease from home, are kept away from the boarding pupils. The school has had considerable criticism passed upon it, because of its location. Many people say that it is not for the best interests of our school that we should have the buildings located where they are. As to that, I can say that the Board of Health has examined the institution, and the only thing that did not meet their approval in connection with the school was the way in which the water was conducted away from the laundry, after having been used for laundry purposes. The soil in the vicinity of the school is very shallow, and it is impossible to build a cesspool. At one time the water was carried away by means of a trench, but since the burning of Chinatown, this has been impossible. As a result, a large portion of the water has of late been standing upon the ground. The Board of Health said that this must not continue, so we immediately closed down our laundry, and gave notice to one of the public laundries to take our linen until further notice. The fact that there was water standing did not seem to exercise the Board of Health very much.
They were acting, as I understood it, with the purpose of preventing a possible contagion, rather than attempting to curb an epidemic that had already gained a foothold.

"The pupils of Punahou and of Ka-melehameha have, I am told, suffered from typhoid fever during the past few months. The mortality of St. Louis will, I think, compare favorably with that of the other two schools. At Kamelehameha, during the past year, seven of the pupils have died. We have lost two. As to Punahou, I cannot speak positively at this time.

"Regarding our location, we are, situated as we are, at the mouth of Nu-anu Valley, always in a fresh breeze, that blows with considerable force, even when there is little or no wind stirring elsewhere. Above us, we have the wealthier class of Chinese merchants for neighbors. Their homes and grounds are kept in the cleanest and neatest conditions possible. Below us, on the makai side, are the Japanese.
I regret to say these neighbors are not so clean. It is, I am positive, their close proximity that has caused most of the criticism that has been leveled against us. Were they out of our way, or were we out of their way, the present talk concerning St. Louis would never have been raised.

"We have learned to expect, every year, just after the 11th of June, to be visited by an epidemic of various complaints. The reason is not hard to find. Our boys lead a regular life here.
It is almost military in its regularity and discipline. When Kamelehameha Day comes, many of them, especially those who have homes in Honolulu, are given unrestrained freedom. The natural result is, that they fill themselves up on ice cream, soda water and other things of a kindred nature. As a consequence, their systems are subjected to a shock, and it takes them often several days to recover from the effects of it. Another thing I sometimes think, that causes them to become sick, is the liberal patronage they bestow upon the perambulating ice cream stands, kept by Japanese. There is no telling how, or under what conditions, the ice cream that they sell has been made. Judging from superficial observation, it would not tend to inspire one with confidence in the methods of its manufacture. I might add that it is a singular thing, but the sickness that appears just after the 11th is, in nine cases out of ten, confined entirely to boys who have homes in this city, or this Island, and who have been home for the holidays.

"The Brothers who are teaching have been at the college for many years. If the place is unhealthy why have they not been ill? Their health is excellent."
